Thank you for sending me up the copy of the blanket travel order I signed in February. There seems to have been some confusion about what I was interested in. I was fully aware of the changes in regulations concerning first class travel. What I was uncertain about was the meaning of the provisions on supplemental per diem and actual subsistence. What brought this to mind was my trip to the West Coast in July when my actual expenses were significantly more than the $40 a day I was reimbursed. Can you give me a translation of what the language on this means? For example, what are the limits of ? I don't want to be niggling about it, but I do strongly subscribe to the proposition that travel--both for myself and for the staff--ought neither to profit nor to cost anyone.

Thanks.
